In Written Form.

These questions are in written form and embody, substantially, the same language used when Mr. Law son was interrogated by members of the committee last week.

These questions asle Mr. Lawson to give the name of the Cabinet officer and the banker alleged to have been involved in the "leak" and the specu-lation that followed, as well as the name of the member of Congress who discussed the matter with Law

Lawson told the committee las week that "a member of Congress" had brought in the names of the Cabi net officer and banker during a con versation between Lawson and this member of Congress.

Declined to Reveal Name.

The financier said the matter was "so serious" that he would decline to reveal any of these names at a preliminary inquiry, but would reveal them to "a special investigating committee." Lawson also supplied "hearsay" evidence that a Cabinet officer, a Senator, and a banker had a joint stock account, and promised to tell a special committee about how they divided the proceeds—"more than a mil-lion dollars." He claimed to have had a conversation with a banker knew another banker, and this l banker, according to the second-hand information, virtually controlled a member of the Cabinet "and could force him to come to New York at

Included In Questions.

The questions about this alleged stock account are also included in the written questions the Rules Committee will press for answer.

Altogether the questions prepared by the committee cover sixteen type-written pages. The committee de-clined to make public these questions in advance of the hearing, evidently on the theory that it would both be unfair to the witness and likewise it might give him undue foreknowledge of the grilling to which he is to Members of the Committee came to the morning hearing prepared to meet any emergency. Not only did Congressman Campbell, ranking Republican member, have ready a mo tion to cite Lawson for contempt-if he falls to answer—but plans were well laid for taking Lawson into Appreciate Possibility.

The members of the Rules Com mittee appreciate that Lawson may have recourse to a writ of habeas corpus in the Federal courts. This has been invoked several times in the past. The more recent case is that of Snowden Marshall, district attorney for the Southern district of New York, who defied the authority of a subcommittee of the Judiciary Com mittee and severely criticised it.

When a Sergeant-at-arms was sent to New York to take Mr. Marshall into custody he sued out a writ of habeas corpus and has never been hailed before the bar of the House. The case is now before the Suprem Court of the United States.

Would Forestall Writ.

However, the committee plans to take Mr. Lawson quickly into custody and forestall a writ if this is possible. These plans, of course, are based on the supposition that Lawson may refuse to testify. It is quite likely that Mr. Lawson has taken precau-tionary measures and his writ may be ready the moment an attempt in made to bring him before the House. In 1873 one Henry Wilcoff was taken into custody of the Sergeantat-arms for refusal to answer at a "leak" inquiry on advance informa-tion as to a President's message. He was detained two days by the House

no attempt to sue out a writ of habeas corpus, and the Rules Committee does not know what might be the outcome should the resourceful Lawnot submit tamely to detention by the Sergeant-at-arms of the House.

Nation's Highest Tribunal Affirms Diggs-Caminetti Sentence.

Diggs were convicted; or to transport an unmarried woman, under eighteen of age, with the intent duce her to engage in prostitution debauchery and immoral practices, for which Hayes was convicted, would seem by the very statement of the facts to embrace transportation for purposes denounced by the act and, therefore, fairly within its meaning."

Of the plea of the defense that the law opens the doors to blackmail

The fact, if it be so, that the act as it is written opens the door to blackmailing operation on a large scale, is no reason why the courts should refuse to enforce it, according to its terms, if within the constitutional authority of Congress. Such consider tions are more appropriately left to the legislative branch of the Govern-ment, which alone had authority to enact and may if it sees fit, amend

The Dissenting Opinion.

In the dissenting opinion, written by Justice McKenna and concurred in by Chief Justice White and Justice Clarke, it was argued that it is natural always to resort for explana tion of a law to its first words. The transporation made unlawful, it was said, was of a "woman or girl 'to besaid, was of a "woman or girl to become a prostitute or to give herself up to debauchery or to engage in any other immoral practice."

The intent of the white slave law, the dissenting Justices held, is to suppress "the white slave traffic, commercial vice, or immorality having a mercenary purpose."

That Congressman Mann in writing the law said there we no intention to interfere with the the States was anot holding the law was holding the law was intended to cover non-commercial vice.
"The result," the opinion summed up, "is grave, and should give us pause."

Subject of Cabinet Discussion.

Because of the prominence and standing of the principals, the Diggs-Caminetti case has occupied national attention since the elopement of F. Drew Caminetti and Maury I. Diggs with Lola Norris, nineteen, and Mar-tha- Warrington, twenty, March 10,

MANN WON'T CHANGE ACT Says He Will Not Offer Any "White

Slave' Amendment. Asked this afternoon if there would be any effort to amend the Mann law so as to exclude noncommercial cases, Congressman Mann, author of the measure, replied. "Not on my part. I have never heard any talk in Congress about changing the law, although there has been talk on the outside of amending it. The Department of Justice has wanted to strengthen the law, while other people wanted to weaken it—if you can call it that by excluding non-commercial cases.

MANY CONTRIBUTE TO INAUGURAL FUND ed So Far Toward Expenses of March 5 Event.

Contributions to the inaugural fund are literally pouring in today. Arthur Peter, chairman of the nance committee, and the committee5s treasurer, reported to Col. Robert N. Harper, chairman of the inaugural committee this afternoon, that indications are that most of the understood assessments made against the various business and profesional men of the city, will have been paid in part before the whirlwind collecting campaign, scheduled to begin this week, is put under way.

More than $45,000 has been subscribed thus far. Additional Contributions.

Mr. Peter this afterneon announced the following additional contributions: Harry Wardman, $1,000; Clarence P. King, $500; G. Nordlinger, $500; Underwood Typewriter Com-pany, $250; Samuel Ross, $250; B. F. Saul, $200; Frank Jeleff, Inc., $100; A. M. McLachlen, $100; George W. Offutt, $100; Joseph Crupper, $100. Following a conference with Charles Douglas, chairman of the reception committee, Colonel Harper nounced this afternoon that plans are again under way for some sort of a "social function" for the night of March 5, to take the place of the inaugural ball, which has been tabooed by President Wilson. The nature of this function, he said, has not yet ben definitely decided upon.

We have not yet given up hopes of having a substitute of some kind for the ball," Colonel Harper said. Rockville to Be Represented.

Rockville and Montgomery county, Md., are to have a big representation in the inaugural parade this year. Col. L. L.
